TeamUP

Transforming Undergraduates into Professionals

TeamUP is a mentoring program that helps in the transformation of Rutgers Business School undergraduates into responsible business professionals. Those students accepted into the program will consult one-on-one with a business professional to obtain insights about the nature of their profession as well as guidance on how to grow and prosper within the profession. TeamUP students can get matched with her/his own mentor, drawn from our pool of motivated business professionals and leaders, many of whom are active Rutgers Alumni committed to helping students succeed.

Business Professionals with at least 3 years of working experience in the fields of Accounting, Finance, Management, IT, Supply Chain, and Marketing are invited to join the Rutgers Business School TeamUP Mentor Pool.

"I am really enjoying my experience in the TeamUP mentorship program. My mentor is great. Through discussions with her I have a better understanding of the marketing industry and realized that I wanted to be more on the agency side rather than company. This was a very valuable and important realization for me."

JinLian Meric, Marketing, Class of 2015

"The program allows the mentee access to a professional in their field of interest and access to guidance they may not get in a classroom setting. The greatest benefit for me is giving back and helping the mentee succeed. I have worked with 3 mentees so far and all of them have got internships during my time as a mentor. I would like to think the guidance I offered helped them through the process."

Rachel Navarro, Vice President, JP Morgan
